Tip concerning your cat's food change

Please give your feline friend the opportunity to get used to our fresh meaty food. The older your animal and the greater the difference to the new food, the longer the switching process can take. The switch usually takes one week, but it can also take two to four weeks.

Cats are probably fixated on their usual food due to its smell and certain ingredients. Experience shows that it helps to mix the new food with the old food on the first day. In any case, it makes sense to switch the food over resolutely, and not to be irritated by initial refusals. Remove uneaten food after half an hour and wait for the next meal.

Our food conversion aids are freeze-dried pieces of meat or fish in minced form. These are extremely aromatic and can be sprinkled over the food in small amounts to increase the cat's interest.
